Question 10A. Why do you think your participation attempts were ignored in class?

- I am not surely exactly. Maybe some people don't like to comment on current events I mention that are controversial.
- A lot of people were participating and the instructor tried calling on others.
- A lot of students were participating that day.
- A professor might have a favorite in the class.
- Age gap, and other students had formed a close knit group.
- All students from different backgrounds participate in my classes and our participation was never ignored.
- ANOTHER PERSON CAN TELL THEIR OPINION IN A BETTER WAY THAN I CAN.
- Answering too many time
- Anxious timing at choosing when to talk during class.
- As a female in a male dominated field, my opinions and work have many times been overlooked compared to male classmates. As we move to the right on the scale of professorial ineptitude, I find instructors less willing to engage in sustained, thoughtful discussion with the class.
- At times I can be very opinionated which can be received harshly.
- At times I feel I'm ignored because the professor wants other people in the class to share their thoughts or opinions.
- At times I over participate. In order to give fair participation to other students, I might be ignored.
- Bc students were preoccupied with other work and weren't paying attention
- because cretain professor have favoritism based on the race
- Because everyone have there own opinion
- Because I always like yo participate and teacher said to give the opportunity to other students that do not raise their hand
- Because I am not a native speaker and sometimes when I respond in class I need longer time than English speakers to formulate mu thoughts
- Because I am usually quiet so I might not have had anything important to say and professor was biased
- Because I answer questions to much
- Because I constantly ask questions and follow up questions and that tends to annoy some professors and students.
- Because I don't speak up
- Because I have conservative views
- Because I once discuss a topic of dreamers and the faculty act like he was ignoring may opinions.
- because i participate to much and my opinion is different than the general census
- Because I participate too much, the Professor might want other people to get involved in the dicussion.
- Because I participated too much
- Because I raise my hand frequently and the professor wanted to give others a chance.
- Because I raised my hand too much and the instructor wants other people to talk

Because I speak low

Because i speak with an accent but i am confident that i have a retentive memory than the people who ignore me.
Because I tend to be very analytical and professors don't like to spend too much time on an issue. Also I suspect because I am older (in my 40s) and perhaps professors think I don't need attention.

Because I usually sit it in the back.

Because I would play devil's advocate and they didn't enjoy someone going against their ideas.

Because I'm not assertive enough.

Because it didnt matter.

because it was a topic on race and I am white trying to express an opinion that is against hers.

Because it wasn't what the mass agreed on.

Because it's a big class.

Because John Jay does not do enough for its LGBT community and much of the faculty still lives in the dark ages when it comes to issues affecting this community.

Because many people want to participated

Because my accent

Because my instructor was rude to me since the first day and I expressed that it was not appreciated.

Because of active participants in interaction with instructor.

Because of my age

Because of my gender

Because of previous multiple attempt to participate.

Because of previous participation I had an opinion that differed from the professor. I corrected a professor when they spoke incorrectly about a topic.

Because of too much participation.

Because others needed an opportunity to engage in classroom discussion.

Because previous classes, my participation was not deemed worthy of a response.

Because professors do not like being told that what they are saying is wrong, and they dont like being questioned

Because she was moving into another topic

Because that professor doesn't like to hear from its students.

Because the answer wasn't right.

Because the class was afr 150 and the professor doesn't want black students to talk because I had different opinion about slavery and colonization.

Because the lesson comes first and there is no time for my participation.

Because the professor didnt know the answer

Because the professor gave opportunities to others.

Because the professor had to proceed to the next point he had to make regarding the lesson.

Because the students that always participate always get picked.

Because there are more people who are participating and everyone deserves a chance to speak

- Because there are so many students and not enough time to get to everyone.
- Because there were other students who had to participate in class.
- Because they wanted to give other students a chance to speak after I had spoken consistently within class
- Because they wanted to hear from someone else.
- Because they were few people participating.
- Because we be going into a different topic
- Because when they have their own opinion, they don't want to hear yours
- Because when you participate sometimes, you guess the answer and guessing are not allowed.
- Big class
- Big classes, professors might be running out of time
- Can be helpful
- cause the teacher was ignorant
- Class had too many students.
- Class was lecture driven mostly by professor's lesson.
- Class was probably running low on time.
- Classes too big
- Classmates who often interrupt and do not let a person finish their opinion.
- Classroom size was too large for teacher to get to everyone
- Classroom consisted of too many students attempting to participate.
- Classroom size.
- Could only be because I was sitting in the back and the student called upon was right in front of kit
- crowded class.
- Did not understand the work, so it seems as if I was not on the same level as the other kids. At times the professor would chose the students who he/she would think know the answer.
- didn't agree with professor & was supposed to 'give other students a chance to answer'
- Didn't have time to answer all questions
- didnt hear me
- Differed from the norm
- Difference in opinon.
- difference of opinion from instructor
- Different Opinions
- Different political views
- disagreement

Disagreement

Disagreement with Professoe

Do not know

Due to my disagreement in opinion with the instructor.

During discussions of high political tension, I am known to have conservative opinions that differ greatly.

Either because the professor didn't like me or because the professor preferred other students more than others.

Either other students speak over someone else or there is no 'hand raising' policy. It's not much of an issue, just how things can be/are in a classroom.

Excessive participation

Faculty did not notice me attempting to participate.

Generally to give others a chance to speak or because the class was out of time.

Has not happened

I always am the one to participate in class, I guess its to get others a chance.

I am a conservative/republican and almost all the staff and students in the college are liberal/democrat and have no respect for my view point on social and political issues.

I am a Republican who voted for Trump...the anti Trump bias at John Jay is absolutely disgusting and out in the open.

I am an overachiever and sometimes dominate class discussion therefore, the professor sometimes ignores me for prolonged period of time.

I am not sure

I am not sure

I am not sure why, probably because ther are many students raising their hands as well.

I am not sure.

I am not sure.

I am unsure of why I was ignored.

I answer too many questions so they try to get other students to participate

I ask to many questions.

I believe it was because he did not see my hand, nothing intentional or disrespectful

I believe it was largely due to the fact that I participate too much in class. Sometimes I would not get a chance at answering the question solely for the purpose of allowing someone who does not usually participate to answer.

I believe my ideas do not align with the professor. Basically he will opt to choose a student who most likely will align with his path of thinking. I bring a different perspective and the professor does not seem to favor that.

i believe the prof. did not hear me!

I did not speak loud enough

I didn't speak loud enough, and other people were able to talk over me.

I disagreed with the professors views often/ I challenge them too much?

I do not know

I dont get called on.

i dont know

I don't know

I don't know

I don't know

I don't know

I don't know

I don't know .

I don't know maybe too many people raised their hand in class.

I dont know.

I don't normally engage conversations

I don't think they were

I feel that I wasn't quick enough to raise my hand in order to participate. My seat location too.

I felt due to presumption of knowing what I will say.

I guess because that since I myself am Hispanic like the majority of people in the college the teacher has already heard similar answers from other students

I had already participated quite a lot.

I had already spoken.

I have never felt ignored in class.

I have no clue

I have only had this happen to me with two professors in all my years at John Jay. However, because I am a night student and i'm also in my late 30s I was more aware of the unprofessional behavior and disregard of the professors. I don't believe I was the only one ignored. I believe that because there professors were older and highly regarded in their field, they lacked the ability to respect their younger students. I also found that I struggled to communicate with these professors because they were set in their ways and I was not the only one who struggled. I really don't believe it was personal, there are always some bad apples.

I have problems speaking proply and am hyperactive I believe it a professor probably toguht it was for the best to avoid me to save me the grief.

I have repeatedly raised my hand when no other student would raise their hand and I have been looked over while another student (with hand down) was called on. Similar situation when students are asked to read something from the board, I have never been called on in this particular class.

I have speech problems so talking is hard so when I try to pracptatie I can stutter and it can take longer

I know that professors want everyone to participate and I believe I overparticipate.

I participate more then others, therefore I'm ignored

I participate often

I participate often and my professor may have ignored me to hear the opinions of others in my class. Nothing my professor did was discriminatory.

I participate too much.

I participate too much. Meanwhile, no one else participates in class. The instructor prefer hearing from people who have not spoken.

I participated too much and other students need to be given a chance.

I participated too often resulting in the professor selecting those who do not participate as often.

- I personally find it difficult to tell when is the right time to speak in some classes.
- I raise my hand too much... Have to give other people a chance to answer, never offended at all for it, Professors usually notice that I always raise my hand regardless
- I raised my hand many times in class and was not called on
- I share different views from certain professors and students
- I think because of how i dress they assume that my responses may not be up to the standard of someone who is educated.
- I think he didn't see my hands up but it happened a few times
I think it might have been because of the teacher because he didn't care about many of the other race groups in class and made racist remarks about a Arabic symbol.
- I think its because other people raise their hands first so its only fair to call on them, i dnt think its personal.
- I think my participation attempts were ignored in class because I felt the professor I did not have anything to contribute to the discussion.
- I think my participation was ignored in class because others that always answered questions built more of a rapport with the professor.
- I think sometimes being in a larger class, the instructor simply cannot call on everyone.
- I think sometimes participation is ignored because the Professor has a very set idea of where they want to lead the conversation and having differing ideas would make them have to waste their time trying to argue with students.
- I think that my participation attempts were ignored in class probably because the Professor may have just wanted to get through with the lecture.
- I think the professor thinks I participate too much and wanted to hear from someone else.
- I think there is still some people who are racist toward certain especially trump supporter.
- I was being intimidated
- I was not a favorite of the professor who picked on certain students over others
- I was not ignored
- I wasn't loud enough
- I wasn't loud enough like the other students.
- I would raise my hand to answer questions and never get called on. Sometimes in classes where I spoke a lot other times in classes where I did not participate much.
- Idk
- idk
- Idk
- If someone doesn't want to hear what you have to say.
- If the class in big, it is difficult for the profs. to hear what each student has to say.
- I'm not ignored
- Im not sure
- I'm not sure
- I'm not sure
- I'm not sure

I'm not sure why, maybe it's because I'm not loud, persistent with it.

I'm quiet and introverted. There are a lot of loud and students who shout out answers instead of raising their hands so I don't get the chance to speak. Or by the time the professor notices my hand, a couple people have already shouted the answer.

Implicit Bias; To Give Others an Opportunity to Participate; Opinions are too strong

In a class about gender when my opinions did not align with the professor I was singled out, ignored in a catty vindictive way. all my work was done in this class and i felt my grade was lower than it should be.

In order to get more topics covered in class before the bell or in the sake of time.

Instructor seemed to pick on me as a last resort.

Instructor was distracted

It contrasted with the general opinion.

It could be misleading the topic of the discussion or no time

It has happened on a rare occasion, but I don't think it was intentional by the instructor.

it is rarely

It was a big class and I don't think I was ignored but rather not called on as much as I would have liked.

it was not

it was not the answer expected to be heard

It wasn't conventional thinking.

It wasn't intentional or based on any identities

It's bound to happen sometime.

It's possible it was not relevant enough.

Just because I participated too much; he wanted others to participate.

Just felt like it. Most of my classmates are a little younger than I am.

Just many people responding to a question or discussion. Lost in the crowd I guess.

Kids were rude and interrupted me,

Lack of time

lack of time

Lack of time to allow the whole class to speak

Last minute hand raises

Less motivated and/or enthusiastic limited time

Limited time. Lack of knowledge regarding questioning. Difference of opinion between teacher and myself in combination with what needs to be done in class does not allow for questions which are related to the subject at hand but are not part of the curriculum.

Majority of the time is because we have a lot of material to cover and the class is out of pace.

Many other students were trying to participate many people wanted a chance to speak as well

Many students were willing to participate.

May have not caught the professor's eye

Maybe a Case of favoritism

My opinion was often different than my professor.

My outspoken and controversial nature in opinions

My participation attempts are either wrong and a different student responds correctly after, which the professor responds to instead rather than discussing how or why my input was incorrect. Other times, professors have selective hearing.

My participation attempts were ignored in class due to my background, identity, sexuality, and gender depending on the class and conversation taking place.

My participation attempts were never ignored in class, but fairly respected.

My participation attempts were only ignored if the professor had received adequate participation.

My participation was never ignored in my academic studies.

Not enough time for everyone to give their thoughts on the matter.

Not enough time to discuss topics further or have too many students.

Not enough time to participate, I guess

not enough time, big classroom

Not in all my classes but just one this has never been an issue before. but i notice that the teacher picks only one if not only the girls. For whatever the reason the girls attempt to answer any questions is always pretty good. As for the guys i feel we are looked at as dumb. Half of the time i have my hand up in this class wanting to give my Opinion and i never get picked. So most times i just say what im thinking. I understand its not a class i careful as much but i like to give anything i do 100%. This is a class i am simply never interested in simply because my voice is never heard my attempts for participation are simply ignored.

Not intentionally but sometimes it does in previous years.

Not intentionally ignored, just sometimes when there are controversial topics everyone wants to speak at once, so if the instructor doesn't do a good job at maintaining class order then the students can sometimes make it difficult for other opinions to be heard.

Not mine, but rather another person's attempts were ignored due to their very very different opinion that went against the grain of the majority held class beliefs. Sometimes not being from New York inhibits your ability to relate and native born students make it known.

Not sure, could be because of my gender

Not sure, maybe due to gender

Not sure, the teacher could be a jerk or a smart ass

Not sure.

Not too sure. I've come across professors who don't really care for your opinion but rather manipulate what you think and force feed you their ideas rather than accepting what one thinks. But that's not all teachers, rarely have I come across this at John Jay.

Not enough classroom time

Now t

Often, I participated too much and wanted others to take a chance.

Only a few male professors may have been uncomfortable because I am gay

Only because the professor probably didn't hear me since I was in a fairly large class

Only focuses on first student to respond/gets sidetracked after

Only if too many people were responding

Only once in John Jay I had an issue with the Professor. She was rude, dismissive ave disrespectful towards me. I complained to her boss. I felt she took her side but I let it slide.

Other kids had their hand raised in addition I sit in the back so its hard to see me at times.

Other opinions might be more diverse to the situation and therefore preferred

Other people's opinions were more valued than mine

Other student had questions

Other students in the class receive more attention from certain instructors

Other students need to participate

Other students participate more than me. So, it's easier to pick on them in addition I sit in the back so the professor doesn't see me that much.

Others students we're also participating.

Others were already chosen to answer.

Primarily because of my race and gender. Specially, the fact that I am a Black woman my opinions is often ignored or minimized.

Probably were not related tot he topic of discussion.

So many other kids were trying to participate at the same time. The professor can't call on everyone at the same time.
Soft spoken
Some classes have many students and there is not enough time to get my point across
Some classes students would be allowed to shout out their opinions.
Some instructors don't want to be bothered. Others are wonderful, but some do not wish to be bothered with opinions that differ from their own even if there is a consensus in the scientific community.
Some one else raised their hand first
Some professors just do not like students asking questions.
Some time professors favor other students

Teacher's personality
That does not happen very often, it happens rarely and it's mainly because many students want to participate
That happened only in one of the classes that I've been taking so far. I noticed that it happened with other foreign born students as well. I assumed that the professor had some sorts of stereotypes of American students being naturally advantageous towards the foreign born ones. I however got an A in that class.
The faculty wasn't accepting me
The professor did not care to have my opinion open for public discussion after realizing it contradicted his own.
The professor did not want to deal with the topic at hand.
The professor did not want to listen to the students.
The professor didn't see my hand raised.

The professor is too focused on his own thoughts. I raise my hand and I see the professor has looked and seen me raise my hand yet, they chose to ignore me.

The Professor knew it would go against her opinion, because I made an unhappy facial expression and raised my hands.

The professor may have been pressed for time.

The professor may not have seen my hand raised.

The professor probably didn't see me or they wanted to just move on from the topic.

the professor probably wanted to get through material and not be slowed down by participation.

The professor tends to call on the same student.

The professor wanted other students to participate

The professor wants to go forward and finish the lesson.

The professor was more interested in what the women had to say.

The professor was trying to move class discussion forward.

The professors habitually picked those who are opinionated, overlooking those who don't talk as much.

The teacher missed it or wanted to move on with the discussion.

The topic was on abortion which is a heavy topic.

There are many others trying to participate.

There are so many student comments to sift through and just the one professor. I don't know how my professors do what they do. They are pretty amazing.

There are some students that just care about themselves and like to show that they only care about themselves instead of keeping to themselves.

There aren't often students in the class room who call out and loudly express their opinions and those who raise their hands in class are picked because others call out and take up discussion time.

There have been times when I have raised my hand in class and I would not get called on.

There have been times when I would be raising my hand to participate for minutes at a time, and others are chosen to speak until there is no more time for the subject.

There may have been other students that had their hand raised to answer and ended up answering the question that i was going to answer.

There was not enough time. I participated more than anybody else. They were a guest speaker and they didn't know me, weren't introduced to me, or I reminded them of someone and they were afraid to hear me out.

There were other students raising their hands too who wanted to participate.

There were too many people participating.

This only happens in one class, and it is solely because this particular class is made up of a lot of students that have already taken the professor before. There are a lot of side conversation during the class, about things that leave those of us who have never had this professor out of the conversation. These instances occur either at the beginning of the class, and we (the 10 or so of us that have never had the professor before) sit there listening to this conversation that we have no idea what it is about, or we could be in the middle of a lesson and something comes up that triggers an off topic conversation.

Views differed from the professor

We don't have time to analyze the details and depth of all questions asked in class.

Question 10B. Why do you think your opinion was not respected by the instructor?

A difference of experience, rather than discrimination

A professor might not have liked something I said in an earlier class.

A reaction that I was given after.

Again, due to having conservative views.

Although, it was rare the instructor was belittling to my response.

An instructor on few occasions did not agree and acted to devalue my opinion

ANOTHER PERSON CAN TELL THEIR OPINION IN A BETTER WAY THAN I CAN.

Arguments should be based off facts not opinions.

At the time I believe we just simply had different views on current events.

At times I can be very opinionated which can be received harshly.

Because it was contrarian--not to be rude or disrespectful nor to trigger someone, but just to look at different sides--and we live in difficult times due to the election and heightened tensions.

Because 1) your answer might be wrong and 2) your answer didn't make sense

Because he doesn't see me past a slave even though slavery ended hundred years ago.

Because he had different opinions that he was not willing to change.

Because he had his set values and perspective.

Because he was biased

Because he/she is closed-minded to my side of the spectrum.

Because I am a Christian and most professors hate Christianity so they are able to disrespect the religion, but I cannot say anything.

because I am white expressing the opposite opinion of her anti-white ideology.

Because I did not agree with him because I had different opinions on some matters

Because I have a different political opinion, that most of my professors

because I was black

because I was the only girl in the group

Because it differed from his own teachings and beliefs

Because it might be different.

Because it was different from the instructor's.

Because it was different from theirs. :/

Because it was different.

Because it wasn't taken into consideration

because it's something they did not want to hear

Because my answer may usually explain what the professor is going to speak about and they rather say it themselves.

Because my answers are wrong.

Because my opinion differed largely from the commonly accepted opinion.

because my opinion was different than their own. I had a different opinion on a multitude of topics including law enforcement and politics and when I tried to voice my opinion I was verbally attacked by the professor and students

Because my opinion was not funny as some others were

Because of a professor's conscious or unconscious biases toward women in STEM.

Because of being a middle class white girl who challenged the discussion by placing devils advocate dumb question.

Either jerk or smart ass

Everyone can have a difference in opinions. It is normal.

Everyone has different opinions and not all of them coexist together and like it or not alot of professors are closed minded and won't accept another opinion unless it has aspects of their ideas.

Faces made or an attitude given

Generality

He acts like a know it all and isnt open to other ideas

He believed very strongly in the opposite

He believes his view is correct or he doesn't listen. He answers before we even finish giving our own opinion.

He didn't care

He just disregarded my entire statement, said anyways, and proceeded to call on another student.

He was passionate about the topic.

He/she does not care

He/She may of have a bad day.

He's had something against me since the first day of class.

Humans can be stubborn

I am a Republican who voted for Trump...the anti Trump bias at John Jay is absolutely disgusting and out in the open.

I am cut short by certain professors when I challenge their teaching premise; I think because of my age (in my 40s) certain professors would prefer not to engage with me.

I am not sure. He is not racist or sexist.

I believe John Jay professor are very professional so they don't have any racism toward certain group. They are respectful.

I believe the individual instructor lacked experience

I can recall this one particular professor, who is also the head of the department (which made it even harder for me escalate), whom often disregarded most of my opinions but showed favoritism with a lot of the males in the class. Not to mention I tried meeting with him several times personally to ensure I was completing my term assignment correctly and he often seemed bothered by me meeting with him. He was just a rude man! I had not and still have not experienced that with any other professor.

I do not think my instructor allows for deep or rational conversation on differing opinions.

i dont

I don't feel that way. I feel the instructor do respect it.

i dont know

I dont know

I don't know

i don't remember

I feel the instructor totally disagreed about my opinion on abortion and tried to ask the same question in a different way to see if I would change my opinion.

I had a different opinion than the instructor and my opinion was dismissed

I had concerns with some of the statements that a teacher made. I knew them to be untrue and I emailed another professor about them. He asked me if I had problems with women of color in power position. Both myself and the professor I brought the concerns to are white males.

I have expressed direct disagreements, in constructive ways, with the instructed a few times; sometimes in forms of a questions, others citing research or recent events. I have noticed that if the subject is of a 'fine line' matter, or has a lot of 'grey area', the instructor has shown clear distain and disinterest in my thoughts.

I have had instructors who rather than respect or have a discussion with other opinions, have shut it down or called it wrong rather than converse about it in detail.

I have had professors who have one way of thinking and are not open minded.

I have never experienced anything like that.

I have no idea .

I tend to explain a topic not as well as I want to so I feel the professor will just say anything to move on from what I say.

I think my opinion is respected.

I think my opinion was not respected by the instructor because they felt they are smarter than I am.

I think my opinion was not respected by the instructor probably because the professor felt like I was criticizing/critiquing his lesson and did not like the idea of it.

I think she just thought I was dumb. I think differently and see things from different perspectives, but I'm not dumb.

I think that my opinion was not respected because the instructor, he or she is there to teach us so therefore in the process they do not believe that we the students have anything to teach because they already have earned their degrees and we students we are just now getting our degree. Some instructors have this 'air' of being above everyone/ know it all since they receive high academic training especially if they are - tenured- even worse, a free pass to get away with certain behaviors/comments. They feel untouchable!

I was not an active student in class

I wasn't loud enough

I went on the wrong direction and I don't want to admit my mistakes. It was my fault.

Idk

idk

Idk

Ignored it

Im not sure

Im not sure

I'm very strongly opinioned.

In one instance, I believe it is because the instructor was not listening and because of her credentials she believed she could be unkind instead of teaching appropriately. It was more a personal trait than teaching style.

Instructor always respected my opinion

Instructor did not understand

Instructor disagreed with my views and made a gesture of disregard.

Instructor had a different view

Instructor may have strong opinions on some issues.

Instructor not open to the idea.

Instructor was not open to opinions about a certain topic in criminal justice reform and rehabilitation.

Instructor was too biased of his own opinions.

Isn't this multiple choice? Because she didn't like me!

It differed from the instructors.

It is

It is perceived to be backed by information not agreed upon by the instructor.

It may have been off topic

It may have come off as rude.

It never was disrespected by a professor.

It was a reference to something no one was familiar with.

It was against the professor's opinion

It was an opinion matter. Everyone is entitled to his or her own opinion.

It was different from theirs yet they still respect my opinion.

it was not

It was not further discussed.

It was not in line with the professors view of the issue discussed

It was not really acknowledge, somewhat shrugged off and then the instructor continued with his/her own opinion.

It was respected.

It wasn't similar to the instructors

It wasn't what she wanted to hear in her opinion

It wasn't what they wanted to hear.

It's hard when there are a lot of tensions over recent issues. It got personal.

It's more or less a devil's advocate type of deal.

Jaded professor

John Jay is a very liberal college, so, even though I do not agree with conservative ideals, I have seen a fair amount of people with that opinion treated like oddities in class.

Jumping over an opinion to discuss the materials or move the discussion along.

Just by other student not Instructor

Just differing opinions on approach to psychological therapy (different schools of thought) maybe because I am a woman.

Maybe because i have an accent.

Maybe he or she did not agree

Maybe they were looking for a specific idea and what I said was not what they were looking for.

Most academic departments within the college is primarily run by older white men with a sense of entitlement and can be a bit racist but is not always conscious or aware of it.

most of the time.

Most Professors have the same outlook on Politics.

Moved on and didn't bother to go further into detail

My inability to properly communicate idea's lead the teacher to make assumptions about my views. For example, Trump crap came up in multiple class's. If I bashed Trump for his immigration ban, my opinion would be accepted. If I point out that Trump's authority to wage war or impose an immigration ban is a direct result of the past four presidents use of executive orders, I am viewed as a right wing nutcase or something as opposed to someone who is concerned with the executive branch usurping the authority of the judicial and legislative branches of government. If I was able to properly explain my view in a concise manner, I assume my opinion would be taken more seriously or at least, I would not be labeled in such a manner.

My male professors look down on female students my military background teacher was not responsive to me due to the ongoing (at the time) trump election.

My opinion does not correspond with the stereotype of my race, ethnicity, and gender.

My opinion has never been disrespected.

She had a different tone when responding to my answer because of where i live. She had pointed out that because i live out in Long Island it is different for me and things are easier than it is in Queens. Her responses via email were very rude, single worded and had a patronizing tone to it.
She had a strong believe that her opinion was the correct one.
She laughed at my answer to a question and disregarded my statement
She wanted others to respond and other didn't .
She wouldn't let me or other students speak our opinions sometimes. She will often interrupt or say she disagreed with our opinion. However, she is a good professor.
Shutting down my opinion
Some individuals have difficulty considering the views of those they see as intellectually beneath them.
Some instructors are keen to the right answer.
Some instructors are not open to new ideas/opinions from students.
Some professors believe their opinion is always correct some professors handle their classroom as if their opinion is the only thing that matters and if you don't say it in the same way they would, it's not valid.

Sometimes Professors do not like being proven wrong, or made aware of having racist or sexist sentiments. They do not like being embarrassed so they just become nastier to prove their point is the RIGHT point to make.
Sometimes, it may just get ignored because its not aligned with the 'educational lesson'

The instructor felt their opinion was the correct one.
The instructor is ignorant
The instructor made it a point to not call on me. and when she did she was rude and curt. others in the class noticed and said this was really gross of college instructor

The professor does not agree with me or what I think
The Professor felt it was not relevant
The professor ignored my comments.
The Professor is very closed minded

The professor over spoke while i was speaking and did not allow me to continue answering the question, it just seems as if my opinion did not matter. This only occurred on one occasion.

The professor talks down on students in the class makes us feel beneath him

The professor was too focus on his own ideas and not listening to others ideas.

The topic may have been boring, or I may have said too much.

Their own personal biases.

Their views do not always correspond with mine and were seen as 'wrong' or improper.

they are human it is in human nature to disagree with something you don't believe is true

They assume because of my disibility I dont know as much as I do and when I'm wrong I've been rudely crocted

They did listen to what I had to say, when i was asking a question i was cut off. The professor had made assumptions and did not give me the same respect of hearing my voice.

They disagreed.

They had different opinions

They have a single opinion that, if does not match my own, is dismissed.

They thought what they said was right and what I said was wrong. When I tried to correct them to help them, they got offended and took it personally.

THEY WANT TO GET THERE MESSAGE OUT 1ST.

They were just not seeing it the way I was and I believe that my opinion should be respected.

They were probably upset at the comment in regards to their lesson. When a person is challenged, they try to defend themselves.

They weren't

This happen once, my opinion was not respected because my views went against those of the professor and the class majority. As a result, I felt as if I was judged after that and my grading was based on his failure to accept my opinion

This has never happened.

This instructor said that I was wrong Even though it was my opinion

This is mainly in respect to the professor of Philosphy, Amie Macdonald, who outright disliked me for my political opinions whenever I tried to challenge her or a classmate in class discussions. This happened so much so that I realized she held no respect for me as a student and I stopped participating in that class. Please do not name me in the results of the survey if anyone is contacted on behalf of my comments about her, I wish to remain anonymous.

This is usually because I am smarter than the instructor, and he/she conflates what is a fact or logically sound conclusion with something opinionated and specious.

This never happened to me yet.

this particular instructor and i come from different waves of feminist thought. she gets annoyed with me sometimes for expecting more from her.

TO me i feel the teacher simply doesn't like me. I know i don't agree with his view set on life. But i don't disrespect him in any way he pushes his views on to others and i understand why. But there are things that simply dont make sense. I get a vibe he dislikes me as for why?! I truly dont know why? I have never had any issues with a teacher and most if not all of my papers tend to be graded pretty good. For whatever reason in this class my papers are nothing.. I understanding as favoritism to the girls Specifically some more then others.

To save time.

Too much participation

Unequal distribution of attention to students

unsure

We had differing ideas on what a passage meant yet I was made to feel like my interpretation was foolish or/invalid, it made me not participate as much for the rest of the semester.

We were talking about Donald trump in class, I defended a particular issue and she immediately stopped me and told me I was wrong. She refused to let me continue and called on other students and continued to speak herself.

Yes he doesn't listen my presentation completely

Yes, by a paper submitted against the professor's known favorite religious author, which inflicted a bad grade though he did say we could.

Yes, When I said that 'this is a man's world' he did not respond. He also said FBI 'Female Body Inspector'

Detailed Responses:

I believe you should hire who is qualified

A faculty member should not be recruited due to their background but rather their qualifications. This is an absurd question to ask.

A merit based system is best . A person's race/ethnicity matters not. It is their qualifications which should be considered.

A multicultural-diverse community

general immature and insensitive remarks
Immigration status
Race, gender, and culture

Question 17. STUDENTS: If you witness that a discriminatory/stereotypical comment is made, how do you react?
(Other – please specify)

Thematic Summation of “Other” Write-in Responses:

Theme	Percent to Total
Intervene	63.3%
Ignore	18.4%
Report	8.2%
Discuss with Others	4.1%
Laugh	2.0%
Unsure	2.0%
Write about it	2.0%

Detailed Responses:

I educate the ignorant.

I educate the person that is being discriminatory/stereotypical on the different ways people can communicate with each other in a non-discriminatory way. For example: explaining that people can communicate with each other by just addressing each other as people or by name and not in ways that discriminate others.

I go right up to the person saying the comment and confront them outright.

i ignore it because I'm not sure what to do.

I intervene

I may speak about it to the individual making the comment if i am knowledgeable about the facts.

I never seen any of that type of behavior

I say something right then and there

I speak to the person who made the comment.

I stand up for that person

I stand up to the person and correct them on how they are reacting.

I talk to the people involved

I talk to the person who made that comment.

I talk to the person who made the comment (why is this not an option?)

I will talk to them and say there's no place to say that. Be careful what you say, it may offend someone.

I would attempt to have an honest discussion with the person about what happened and attempt to discourage that behavior where it would create a difficult or hostile environment at school.

I would get involved

I would probably talk to the individual that the comment is made against. Once I do that I would make a decision on what to do next, based on the feelings, and mental space of that targeted individual.

I would tell them to not say it again, but if said again i will get hostile

I write about it (to ponder the issue)

If the comment is made to another person with the intention to harass I would most likely intervene. People use discriminatory and stereotypical comments all the time with friends/colleagues, etc. It depends on how they are used.

ignore it because the confrontation with the immature children isn't worth it

Ignored it at first, but when it's persisted Confronted the people making the remarks

I'll say something

It depends on my knowledge on the comment and I would sarcastically correct their ignorance with History and fact.
 Just feel shocked about it. It wasn't faculty or staff, it was just students.
 Let faculty handle it
 Nothing because the school will not do nothing to correct such behavior and will suspend any student who dares speak out against injustice they see in school.
 piss myself from laughing professors repeatedly isolate and alienate students of color to share 'their perspective' on race-related subjects. i don't feel comfortable confronting my professor.
 Public safety
 Report depending on situation/context/severity/intent of comment reported to ADL and spoke up in class say something to that person
 Share with close friend or family
 Speak to the person making the statement.
 Stand up for the person being discriminated
 Stay away from the person
 Talk it out with the people involved
 Talk to nearby staff/faculty Talk to the person that it happen to the context in which it was said
 Usually at me, everyone hates jews, at least they aren't gassing us like they used to Q18A. IF YES: Do you feel that the discrimination or harassment you experienced was due to someone else's perception of your..? (Other – please specify)

Apparent intellect everything

Q19. STUDENTS: If you experience discrimination or harassment, how do you react? (Other – please specify)

Thematic Summation of “Other” Write-in Responses:

Theme	Percent to Total
Address it	66.7%
Report	10.4%
Discuss with Others	6.3%
Ignore	6.3%
Feel Sad	4.2%
Depends Upon What Was said	2.1%
Unsure	2.1%
Write about it	2.1%

Detailed Responses:

address it with the person committing it

Address the person who made me feel uncomfortable.

Again, I educate the ignorant.

Be passive

Be sad

Can't say

Confront person

confront the person

Confront them

Confront them

Cry

definitely stand up for myself

Depending on the situation and or severity of harassment I would likely report it to an appropriate person or office.

Depends on the level of discrimination or harassment.

handle it myself

Have not experience any

I address the person who said it.

I approach the person

I confront the individual responsible for the discriminatory comment and/or harassment

I confront the person

I confront the person directly

I don't challenge it because I don't want to get a lower grade from the professor.

I give them a warning

I have not experienced discrimination or harassment, but if I did I would likely go to counseling at John Jay and report it

I insult the offending party(ies)'s mother(s)

I let management at work know

I reply with another discrimination comment and based on harassment I approach the person then report it.

I say something myself

I speak with peers, again depending on the circumstances I want to make sure to resolve the issue, not fan the flames.

I stand up for myself and express my opinion.

I stand up to the person

I switched to online courses so I'm not forced to deal with that but I still study in school

I tell him or her to stop mistreating the person.

I tell my friends about it and to help me confront the issue

I will address the person who made the comment.

I will speak to the person who is discriminating against me.

I would tell that person to not say it again, but if said again I will get hostile

I'd probably hit them. (Maybe.)

Like the previous question, I would first go to an advisor or notify one of the CUNY Service Corp Members.

Often times, challenging a person who is not open to even having a discussion can cause conflict. I am normally a person that would not stay quiet in this type of situation and would say something, but I have experienced it enough to know that in certain situations attempting to address the issue will not help. In a school setting however, I would address it directly if that person was someone I had to interact with on a regular basis.

depends on my knowledge on the comment and I would sarcastically correct their ignorance with History and fact.
